

Could you inspire more women to get into bike riding?

British Cycling's Breeze Network is on the hunt for inspirational women to become our next generation of Breeze champions.

Champions help other women enjoy the fun, fresh air and freedom of bike rides. There's no need to be an expert – just confident on a bike and keen to help others. If you're interested you'll attend a one day course where as well as free national governing body training, you'll receive kit and ongoing support, in return for promoting Breeze and delivering around 12 rides a year.

Why not add an extra dose of girl power and team up with a friend to become Breeze champions and deliver rides together?
